OUTLOOK BRIGHT ARNALL WINNER

Strength Daily Increasing
Shown From Reports
Throughout All Georgia

As the heated race for governor of Georgia enters its final stages, the rising tide of support for Ellis Arnall and the crusade to redeem Georgia from dictatorship is reaching overwhelming proportions.

Every report indicates that Arnall's strength is increasing. Leaders in every section are enlisting in the movement, regardless of past political affiliation.

A state-wide poll, conducted under non-partisan auspices, indicates that Ellis Arnall has a lead of almost four to one and that the lead is mounting daily.

Ellis Arnall said: "We do not concede a single county to the opposition. We hope to bury the present vicious state administration under an avalanche of free ballots, so that there can be no mistake about how Georgia feels about dictatorship, whether at home or in foreign lands."

In the closing days of the campaign citizens in every county are displaying interest in Ellis Arnall, the man. Although the bitter campaign has brought out charges and counter charges the record of Ellis Arnall stands forth clear and unassailable.

Ellis Arnall entered public life as a representative of Coweta county, and received the unprecedented honor of being elected speaker pro tem during his first term.

He served as a Talmadge floor leader, but his independence was demonstrated by his leadership in the fight for old age pensions, the seven-months school term, and free text books measures which Talmadge vetoed.

During his second term he was again guided by the interests of the people and opposed Talmadge in several matters, but so great was Talmadge's respect for the youthful leader that he named him special assistant attorney general in charge of banking matters.

When Rivers succeeded Talmadge, Arnall was named special attorney general. Upon the resignation of Attorney General Yeomans, Arnall was named to this high office. And Talmadge was among the loudest in his praise of the appointment.

Ellis Arnall was re-elected attorney general unanimously and continued to compile one of the most impressive records in the country. He has handled down more than 4,000 opinions, and only three have been overturned in the courts. He has won over 80 per cent of more than 700 cases tried in the court in behalf of Georgia.

Ellis Arnall has never faltered in his campaign to restore the government of Georgia to the people. A vote for Ellis Arnall is a vote to restore decency, dignity and democracy in Georgia.

tobacco field was one of the highest in the county and credit must be given to the girl on the tractor. Her father is a trustee in the local board of education and also a deacon in the Baptist church. They have recently remodeled their home two miles north of Brooklet and have it modernly equipped with electric stove, heater, etc. Miss Hall is not resting on her laurels. She is already planning to swing her steel horse into action in the early fall to plant another defense crop.

SLATER—WATTS
Of cordial interest to a host of their friends in this community, in Macon and Columbia, S. C., is the marriage of Miss Pauline Slater and A. C. Watts, of Macon and Columbia. The marriage took place Saturday morning at 10 o'clock at the home of the bride here. Rev. F. J. Jordan, pastor of the Brooklet Methodist church, officiated.

The bride is the youngest daughter of W. A. Slater and the late Mrs. Slater. She graduated from Brooklet High School and later from G.S.C.V. at Milledgeville. Since her graduation she has been an outstanding member of the U. S. War Department and has been especially recognized and honored fifteen times by that department.

Mr. Jordan has recently received his A.B. degree at the University of Georgia, Athens. He will assume his duties as the Military Academy in September.

FRANK JORDAN JR., NAMED INSTRUCTOR
Frank J. Jordan Jr., son of Rev. and Mrs. F. J. Jordan, of this place, has been appointed instructor at Georgia Military Academy, College Park, Ga. His duties will involve teaching and military discipline. His rank will be that of captain in the regular U. S. Army.

The Military Academy at College Park is a pre-war college preparing boys for West Point, Annapolis and other higher military institutions. It is headed by the late U. S. Army Major General of the Coweta County Circuit Court. He speaks in behalf of ELLIS ARNALL.

With her two brothers in the United States service, Miss Henrietta Hall is doing her bit by staying home and helping with the farm work for her parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Hall.

Miss Hall, a graduate of the Brooklet High School and a former student of Teachers College, climbed aboard a tractor last spring and within a short time was handling it with great ease. During the year she has plowed and prepared ninety acres of land with her tractor. She actually cultivated eighty acres of it.

This year the Halls planted tobacco, corn, peanuts, peas and plenty of garden vegetables and fruit. The

You can lead a horse to water, but you can't make him drink; You can lead a fool to talk, but you can't make him think.

It might be a good idea to check up on ourselves the next time we find ourselves talking too much.

Gordon Franklin, of the Franklin Chevrolet Company and the Central Georgia Gas Company, says he is really "snowed under" with work these days. What would he like to know, Gordon, is how you get "snowed" under this hot weather?

There's much talk about a second front. With the war on all sides of us, just where is a front?

Yes, sir, we think the draft board should draft a few of the many "two-faced" people we have. They should make pretty good soldiers. They could see and shoot the enemy from two directions. But do they draft women, too?

The Germans are certainly making a strong effort to get down to Stalingrad. Could it be that they want to get near the Black Sea so as to get a Turkish bath before the Russian snow sets in?

"Salesmen Want More Gas."—Headlines. So does anyone who has an automobile. But we can't all get it, 'cause you see, we can't all be politicians.

War Bond sales fall behind third straight month.—Secretary of the Treasury. Yes, and if we don't watch out we are going to fall behind in winning this war. There are still too many complacent citizens who haven't bought any War Bonds.

If the war industry could reach up and pull material out of nowhere as easily as people can reach up and pull gossip and slander out of nowhere, there would be no storage in war materials.

"Perch are suckers."—News story from Pierre, S. D. But there are other suckers, too. Watch the people who swallow political campaign speeches.

The moon hid its face awhile Tuesday night. 'Til bet it was ashamed of some of the "carrying-on" it saw down below.

"Work seen as key to winning the war," one observer states. Well, we know a few people who have lost the key.

MAGIC PLANT BALL A GARDEN MARVEL

No Dirt, No Mess, No Bother; Just Wet It And It Grows Without Further Trouble

New York, Aug. 21.—Gardening enthusiasts can now devote all time to their Victory vegetable gardens and still have lovely plants for home decoration with the new Magic Plant Ball. That's the promise of the Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Company in introducing this novelty miniature garden to customers.

Here is the "magic" secret. Seeds of five flowers: Nasturtium, sweet pea, morning glory, dolly, and scarlet runner are carefully wrapped with rich plant foods and the miracle new plant vitamin B-1 in a ball of clean, fragrant, spragum moss. Everything is there but the water. Set the ball in a dish or hanging basket, moisten it—and that's all. In a few days tiny sprouts begin to show. In a few weeks the miniature garden is thick, green and luxuriant.

Women who have used Magic Plant Balls report a strange fascination about them. The flowers, so delicate and beautiful, fascinate them. For those who would like to possess one or more of these remarkable magic plant balls, order blanks supplied by Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Company are available at practically all grocery stores. The new Magic Plant Ball is the perfect gift to wrapppers from any of the famous Colgate-Palmolive-Peet products.

Statesboro Students To Register Tuesday

September 1st is registration day for all seniors and any new students who have moved to Statesboro during the past few months and expect to enter the Statesboro High School during the coming year. The school officials are anxious to get the new students registered as early as possible and to express their desires as to the subjects they would like to take this school year. Plans and understandings should be made by the new students and new students will register on Tuesday, September 1st. The hours are from 9:00 to 11:30, and the place is Statesboro High School building.

Pupils who failed in two or three subjects last year cannot expect to go on with their classes unless they have done something about these conditions. Every student who has done extra studying during the summer and desires to take additional tests will be given an opportunity to do so on the opening day of school.

Coach Salter is expected to arrive in Statesboro to begin his work by September 1st. He is going to want to see all boys interested in football as soon as possible after his arrival. He and the boys will notify you the day and hour to meet at the gymnasium.

CIVILIAN JOBS AT ROBINS AIR FIELD

Men and Women Wanted
In Diversity of Activities,
Says Personnel Director

A large number of jobs are now open at Robins Field and Wellston Air Depot, according to Karl McPherson, civilian director of personnel at the post.

"We are in need of an unlimited number of men and women stenographers, storekeepers, typists and laborers," Mr. McPherson said yesterday.

Concerning the permanence of the work, Mr. McPherson pointed out that the depot is being built of steel and concrete and is in every sense a permanent post.

"It is true," he said, "that employment will not be as large in time of peace as it will in time of war. But those individuals who become the most proficient will in all likelihood have permanent jobs."

Mr. McPherson said that working conditions at the post are highly desirable and that most of the work is clean, conditions will be maintained. "The original plan to give Georgia individuals preference is being carried on," he said. "This is to provide for a permanent skilled working group. We want as far as possible to be neighbors."

With the completion of the model city planned at Wellston, it is probable that a substantial proportion of the post's employees will live within walking distance of their work. Selective service eligibles or persons already in an important defense position will not be considered for work. All civilian employees are hired through the civil service office maintained at 419 Broadway.

Men of almost every trade, from maintenance engineers to office boys, are needed in the development of Wellston, the personnel director concluded.

The Statesman

TALMADGE

Any doctrine that preaches class hatred in Georgia is a sin in the deepest dye. Any doctrine that preaches prejudice is more the doctrine of a hypocrite who is trying to hide under a shadow for the purpose of stealing.

No religious or racial prejudice has any place in a Christian heart.

Georgia, the greatest State in the union, needs a Governor who will recognize his duty.

BROOKLET GIRL PLOWS TO PRODUCE DEFENSE CROPS

With her two brothers in the United States service, Miss Henrietta Hall is doing her bit by staying home and helping with the farm work for her parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Hall.

Could You Be Wrong?

GEORGIA is drawing near the final phase of a gubernatorial program which has been more or less turbulent. There is a reason for that condition: Important situations inevitably stir up natural enthusiasm; enthusiasm is a product of disagreement; disagreement is a proper element of democracy.

Now, just before striking that last decisive blow, we are taking this call, deliberate moment to address to YOU this pertinent, Could you possibly be wrong?

This YOU we are talking to is not your neighbor, who may hear about this question, but it means YOU who are reading it this very moment.

You are not wrong if you are content in support of your favorite candidate, and are willing for your neighbor to exercise the same right as to his; but you are wrong if you berate your neighbor for his lack of patriotism and wisdom, all of which are bodied in your own small mind. You may be absolutely correct in your theories of what is best for the state—we imagine you know you are correct—but you are dead wrong if you are unwilling for your neighbor to stand upon his right, and disagree with you.

It won't be long now till the battle will be over. The fewer wounds you inflict upon your friends, the sooner you will yourself get back to a sense of self-appreciation. You'll want to sit in the same pew at church with the man who disagrees with you about the governorship or the governorship; you'll be sorry if you have wounded him to the point that you cannot grasp his hand and recognize him as a friend and neighbor.

Be careful what happens in your mind and heart these next few days. We'd guess your neighbor is partly wrong—most neighbors are at some time—but watch out that you are not more wrong YOURSELF.

Where's Our Overcoat?

POSSIBLY sympathy will not win a war, but when that's all a fellow has to contribute, that's the best he can do.

A rough cowboy went to his dentist with a toothache and demanded to have the offending removed. When it was done, there was still an ache in an adjoining tooth, and he wanted it yanked out also. The dentist argued, "Don't have it pulled; it only aches through sympathy, and it will soon quit." "Yank her out," commanded the cowboy; "I ain't got no truck for such sympathy!"

So maybe sympathy is out of place in a war, but we've got it for the Russians. We've been told they will be saved if they can hold out till winter sets in again. When we awake yesterday morning and there was a fresh, crisp breath in the air, we grabbed our coat. We're rooting for cold weather and Russia; we're ready to throw away our straw hat. Where's our overcoat!

We Meet in Ireland

THE TIMES has been taking long voyages in recent days—and yet sticking close at home.

One of our subscribers in Ireland received his copy recently, then some thirty days old, but still news to him. Because he had a friend in another organization whom he thought would like to read about Statesboro, he took his copy and walked over to show it to that friend. When he entered the friend's quarters he found that friend reading his own copy of the Times of the same issue. Hugh Arundel and Eldridge Mount, Statesboro soldiers, are the two Irish subscribers who had this contact.

Lied With His Finger

OLD JOB of the Scriptures has been pointed to by all the ages which have come and gone since his day as the criterion of patience.

It will be usually recalled that he was required to stand up to eat for days and days because of boils which interfered with his peace of mind when he sat down. When he stood up to sleep—well that is another question; but we are sure that it was from loss of sleep that he developed that haggard look which stamped him as exceeding in patience. You will recall, however, that he boiled over one time and admitted, "I have said in my wrath all men are liars."

What it was that drove him to this sudden outburst, we are not certain. Now, we don't believe Job intended to be harsh against men who spoke exaggerated pleasantness about their friends, even though Webster, the man who compiled our dictionary, defines "lie—a falsehood uttered or acted for the purpose of deception." If we were placed at the head of one of these new alphabet bureaus with responsibility for issuing permits to vary from the truth, we'd be lenient toward those persons who exercise that permit chiefly for the spreading of sunshine.

But even there we find our philosophy about to run against a snag. It's sometimes evil to spread sunshine and thus build up false hopes, and leave only gloom.

A friend told us this story a few days ago: Five men varying in years from youth to old age sat restfully inside a road house merely gazing; two old men were placidly chewing their cud and quipping lively toward the cuspidor near the center of the room. A stranger drove briskly up in his car; jumped to the ground, quickly entered the building, and greeted the man who sat again at this table. He only spoke one word, "Gentlemen!" Then he counted the men in the room as he pointed to each, "one, two, three, four, five, six," including himself in the count. "Open six beers," he commanded, and the attendant set the opened bottles before the stranger. The old men threw out their quids, the younger men cleared their throats and prepared to share in the feast. The stranger said not another word, but picked up the bottles in rapid succession and gulped down the six cold beers while those who looked on shivered within themselves in disappointment. The stranger walked out and was gone. He hadn't promised in words anything to any man; he had merely pointed at each and pointed at himself; each man was given a thrill as he hoped he was personally in the count. The man had lied with his finger. Was that a definite crime? It had given a pleasant impulse, and we were about to excuse his deception on that score. We are puzzled, however. How can men be so cruel? Maybe that man's finger ought to be cut off!

Where's Our Overcoat?

POSSIBLY sympathy will not win a war, but when that's all a fellow has to contribute, that's the best he can do.

A rough cowboy went to his dentist with a toothache and demanded to have the offending removed. When it was done, there was still an ache in an adjoining tooth, and he wanted it yanked out also. The dentist argued, "Don't have it pulled; it only aches through sympathy, and it will soon quit." "Yank her out," commanded the cowboy; "I ain't got no truck for such sympathy!"

So maybe sympathy is out of place in a war, but we've got it for the Russians. We've been told they will be saved if they can hold out till winter sets in again. When we awake yesterday morning and there was a fresh, crisp breath in the air, we grabbed our coat. We're rooting for cold weather and Russia; we're ready to throw away our straw hat. Where's our overcoat!

We Meet in Ireland

THE TIMES has been taking long voyages in recent days—and yet sticking close at home.

One of our subscribers in Ireland received his copy recently, then some thirty days old, but still news to him. Because he had a friend in another organization whom he thought would like to read about Statesboro, he took his copy and walked over to show it to that friend. When he entered the friend's quarters he found that friend reading his own copy of the Times of the same issue. Hugh Arundel and Eldridge Mount, Statesboro soldiers, are the two Irish subscribers who had this contact.

Lied With His Finger

OLD JOB of the Scriptures has been pointed to by all the ages which have come and gone since his day as the criterion of patience.

It will be usually recalled that he was required to stand up to eat for days and days because of boils which interfered with his peace of mind when he sat down. When he stood up to sleep—well that is another question; but we are sure that it was from loss of sleep that he developed that haggard look which stamped him as exceeding in patience. You will recall, however, that he boiled over one time and admitted, "I have said in my wrath all men are liars."

What it was that drove him to this sudden outburst, we are not certain. Now, we don't believe Job intended to be harsh against men who spoke exaggerated pleasantness about their friends, even though Webster, the man who compiled our dictionary, defines "lie—a falsehood uttered or acted for the purpose of deception." If we were placed at the head of one of these new alphabet bureaus with responsibility for issuing permits to vary from the truth, we'd be lenient toward those persons who exercise that permit chiefly for the spreading of sunshine.

But even there we find our philosophy about to run against a snag. It's sometimes evil to spread sunshine and thus build up false hopes, and leave only gloom.

A friend told us this story a few days ago: Five men varying in years from youth to old age sat restfully inside a road house merely gazing; two old men were placidly chewing their cud and quipping lively toward the cuspidor near the center of the room. A stranger drove briskly up in his car; jumped to the ground, quickly entered the building, and greeted the man who sat again at this table. He only spoke one word, "Gentlemen!" Then he counted the men in the room as he pointed to each, "one, two, three, four, five, six," including himself in the count. "Open six beers," he commanded, and the attendant set the opened bottles before the stranger. The old men threw out their quids, the younger men cleared their throats and prepared to share in the feast. The stranger said not another word, but picked up the bottles in rapid succession and gulped down the six cold beers while those who looked on shivered within themselves in disappointment. The stranger walked out and was gone. He hadn't promised in words anything to any man; he

HAS BIRTHDAY PARTY

Little Julie Simmons, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Homer Simmons, was honored on her fourth birthday with a lovely party given Wednesday afternoon by her mother at their home on North Main street. Mrs. George Johnston directed the games and Mrs. Simmons made moving pictures of the group. Proms, ice cream and birthday cake were served, and balloons and suckers were given as favors.

WILLIAM B. DELOACH

Claxton, Ga., Aug. 20.—William B. DeLoach, 81 years of age, widely known Evans and Bulloch county resident, died at his home tonight after an illness of six months.

He was the owner of large farm and timber holdings in Georgia and widely known as a turpentine operator. He was a member of the DeLoach Primitive Baptist church for fifty years and served as clerk for that church for many years. His wife passed away in 1941 shortly after they had celebrated their fifty-seventh wedding anniversary. He was also the chairman of the first road and revenues commission in Evans county when it was created out of Bulloch and Tattnall counties.

Funeral services will be conducted at the DeLoach church Saturday at 11 a. m., with Elder W. R. Wilkerson officiating. Active pallbearers will be his grandsons, J. G. Gubley, J. W. Arthur Riggs, of Rte. 5, Statesboro, Ga., has arrived at this infantry training center to begin basic training as an infantryman in the army of the United States. He has been assigned to duty with a battalion stressing rifle training.
